ARCHITECTS OFFICES, 14 STEPHENSON
WAY, LONDON NW1
Client: the Architects

The front of Jestico and Whiles' studio can be opened up by raising the glazed screen which is fitted with a standard up-and-over garage door mechanism. As well as indulging their interest in off-the-peg industrially manufactured building components, an opening for craning in large objects and encouraging stack-effect ventilation is created. The line of the vertical opening is continued in the roof by a long opening light equipped with an Italian powered mechanism. This is a building over which the occupants can exert a high degree of environmental control – a machine for working comfortably in.
